the fact that utilities rates the present time are inadequate to provide sufficient revenue to meet the financial demands of the utilities system. It is, however, my opinion that the action of the Council in voting such an increase at this time was done without a thorough, in-depth study of the problem. With a proper study of the problem parhaps an increase in the minimum utility rate could have resulted in less than an 'across board' thirty percent flat increase. Perhaps the increase should have been spread over a reasonable period of time, possibly a yearly ten per cent increase over a period of three years, or even a 15 per cent yourly increase spread over the next two years."

This decision leaves with the Hancock County Planning the acid test which will prove or disprove the effectiveness of an ordinance, some 20 pages in length, and put into effect in 1967 by a previous group of supervisors. Former supervisors framed the ordinance partinent to subdivisions to be developed in Hancock County as a protection to individual citizens investing in subdivisions, as well as a protection to the entire area and spalled out the necessity

This decision came in the wake of a resolution made by the Hancock County Planning Commission, of which Roy Baxter is president, at their last urgently called meeting for the purpose of pointing up to Jourdan River Shores developers their failure to comply with certain sanitation standards as set forth in the ordinance.

By resolution members of the Board of Supervisors were notified of the alleged failure of the Jourdan River Shores developers to comply with cer-

This number gives direct answering service to important police and firedepartment headquarters and is a line intended to be used only in case of dire emergency such as the reporting of a fire or some urgent police call involving quick communication and immediate action. The telephone service also provides direct general information calls for both the Fire and the Police Department. These calls will always be answered by authoritative members of the departments who are required to log each call together with pertinent information regarding the and/or information request

Autos Damaged

No one was injured Sunday morning when a two-car collision occured at at the intersection of Beach Blvd. and Highway 90 at the signal light causing heavy damages to each of the vehicles involved. Highway Patrolmen R. L.

Silkwood and John McCardle were examining officials and charged Robert E. Milne of Houston, Texas, driver of a '66 Yellow Mercury with running a red light and hitting head-on the car driven by Mrs. Paul Vegas of 812 North Beach, driver of a '68 Plymouth Station Wagon. Trial is scheduled for Judge Rhodes court.

Sam Perniciaro, whose wrecking service removed the automobiles from the scene shortly after the accident which occurred about 10:30 Sunday morning, Baid estimated damages to each vehicle would run a thousand dollars or more.

Milne is reported to have said that he did not see the directional light soon enough to apply brakes.

Oppulol Procoutions

The environmental Science Services Administration, a branch of the U.S. Dept. of Commerce says: "When a tornado approaches, your immediate action may mean the difference between life or death". Some precautions are suggested: Stay away from windows. Seek shelter if possible in a steel-framed or reinforced concrete building. Seek shelter under a sturdy table or work bench. Keep the windows

The service further stated that trailers and mobile homes particularly vulnerable during strong winds. In open country where it is impossible to find shelter and there is no time for escape to lie flat in the dearest depression such as a ditch or ravine is advised.

In communications the 'tornado watch" phrase means that a tornado is expected to develop. 'Tornado Warning' means that a tornado has actually been sighted.

water where a fresh water stream meets a salt water bay or ocean making the water neither fresh nor salty but a combination of the two. Dr. Hoskin's study will be of the Wolf and Jordan Rivers and St. Louis Bay, Most Mississippi rivers have mud bottoms with mud sediment suspended in the water giving it a muddy appearance This study will show what effect the mud sediment has on man's use of the water in St. Louis Bay. It will show possible effects on marine life, use of the water and things of this nature. Specific objectives of the project are to '1 identify important sources of sediment supplied to the estuary (2) determine subsequent distribution of these sediments in the estuary '3, identify sites of significant sediment accumulation.

Samples will be collected or. a half-mile grid in approximately forty stations and the sampling program will include water for salinity and suspended sediment, sediment from the water-sediment interface for grain-size analysis; and cores of bottom sediment for rate of accumulation, Samples will be analyzed in the laboratory facilities at USM. Field work on the project will start in July and August and sample inalysis will probably continue through the winter of 1970-71.

A graduate student in geology may become associate: with this project for his master's degree thesis research. Graduate and undergraduate students will work on the research project under Dr. Hoskin's direction. Dr. Hoskin's main area of interest is sediments and he not new to research in this area. While serving as Association Professor at the University of Alaska in Fairbanks he received grants for three consecutive years to study glacier sediment and its accumulation. One study revealed sediment was accumulating so rapidly that the researchers were now walking where only fifty years ago large boats had moved on 300 feet of water. During late June and early July of this year Dr. Hoskins will return to Alaska to do further study of glacier sediment on another grant.

Dr. Hoskin, a member of Beta Beta Beta, Sigma Gamma Epsilon and Sigma Xi, is author and co-author of many published papers and articles concerning his research work in Geology.
